Put on Your Own Oxygen Mask First: As educators, we are programmed to take care of others, and all too often we do so at the expense of our own physical and emotional well-being. Like the directive given on an airplane before take-off, we all need to remember to "put on our own oxygen masks, first" to ensure we have the internal resources to help others. This session will help participants develop strategies to avoid burn-out, by identifying what causes stress, where their personal strengths and growth edges are, and will provide ideas for bringing balance into life. These are life lessons learned the hard way!
